OREGON

Primarius is produced in Oregon, considered to be a cooler climate wine growing region, boasting a long, gentle growing season. With warm summers, mild winters and a long, often rainy springs, the Oregon's climate is particularly well matched to the early ripening Pinot Noir grape.

The grapes in Oregon benefit from growing on a variety of hillside slopes and on a range of soils, created by volcanic activity and sedimentary rock. While Pinot Noir may be the most popular grape grown in the Oregon – Pinot Gris, Pinot Blanc, Chardonnay, Riesling, Gewürztraminer, Sauvignon Blanc, Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Syrah are also produced in this region.

TASTING NOTE

A wonderfully aromatic Pinot Noir with raspberry, rhubarb, clove, vanilla and tomato leaf. Developed strawberry and rhubarb flavors are integrated on the palate. The finish leaves soft tannins and balanced acidity to carry the lingering fruit.
